The Ten Second Rule. A few times in the past, The Simple Dollar has mentioned some reference to a "ten second rule" or a "count to ten rule" without explaining this incredibly powerful tool in detail. In short, the "ten second rule" says that any time you are about to spend any money at all, count to ten slowly and spend that time considering whether or not you should actually spend the money.

The five-second rule, sometimes also the ten-second rule, is a food hygiene myth that states that there is a defined window where it is permissible to pick up food (or sometimes cutlery) after it has been dropped and thus exposed to contamination. Some may believe this assertion, whereas most people employ the rule as an amusing social fiction that allows them to eat a dropped piece of food, despite the potential reservations of their peers.
